BROCK GOT
LARGE BONUSInsurance Commissioner Opens Sitting in Winnipeg

Winnipeg, July 24.—The salaries paid to the manager, secretary and other officials of the Great West Life and a bonus of $10,000 paid this year to J. H. Brock, manager of the company, drew forth the question from W. N. Timey at the opening session of the royal commission on insurance.

Mr. Brock stated that his idea in forming the company had been to create a local interest in the great west. Money had been going out to Great Britain, Eastern Canada and the United States, and he thought there would be considerable interest in a local company. Mr. Brock stated that he had this year been paid a bonus of $10,000.

"Why?" said Mr. Timey. "Because the directors must have believed I deserved it," said Mr. Brock.

"How long have the directors been thinking that way?" asked Mr. Timey.

"I don't know," replied the manager.

Mr. Brock said that there had been no understanding with the directors when his salary was smaller. As to remuneration for his loss in taking the management, he had mentioned the matter of a bonus to one of the directors, Mr. Nanton. He did not think he had mentioned it to any other director.

"You are operating under the company clauses act?" asked Mr. Timey.

"Yes," replied Mr. Brock.

"Doesn't that require you to present such a statement to the shareholders?"

"I don't think so."

Mr. Brock read extracts from the act making out that the bonus should become inoperative when it had not been ratified by the shareholders.

"It would have passed, I have no doubt."

"All the easier to get it through, then," observed Mr. Timey.

Mr. Brock said the company paid the shareholders at the rate of 12 percent. The policyholders had received all the profits due on the managed policies. The expenses of organizing and getting started should be charged to all the policyholders, and not to the policyholders of the particular year in which expenses occurred.

Mr. Timey traced the sale of the stock after the extra issue had been made in 1903. He asked Mr. Brock if that increase of capitalization had not benefited the shareholders considerably?

"Yes," replied Mr. Brock.

"I don't think so."

FOR EXPORTPremier Roblin Speaks of the Crop Outlook in the West.

Winnipeg, July 27.—Seen this morning Premier R. P. Roblin spoke regarding the crop situation. He said, "From information gathered by my department Manitoba will harvest the best crop in her history. Harvest will be ten days at least earlier than the average harvest and the promised yield will tax the transportation companies beyond anything in the past."

If Alberta and Saskatchewan had anything approaching what those in authority report there would be over a hundred million bushels for export; more in fact, than the companies would be able to move in twelve months. Mr. Roblin said the rumor was the veriest nonsense. It is true some fields have lodged on account of heavy growth and of course there is mildew and rust to some extent but the excess above the average stand of even such fields will make up the average yield.

The Lethbridge News is a belated seeker for distinction by an assault on the administration of Western timber resources, and should its present course be continued it may receive the distinction, though this will be of a character not more enviable than the bad logic and worse morality which is employed in its pursuit. Taking as a text the contention of the Minister of the Interior that the twenty-year leases of timber limits has tended to restrict the price of lumber by encouraging production the News reviews the supposed virtue of the timber administration under the former Government, pays its compliments to Mr. Sifton, finds in Ontario an example of ideal timber regulations, characteristically misrepresents the lumber situation in Alberta, and its belief that there is a combine among Alberta lumbermen will take a shot at the Alberta Government for not prosecuting said alleged combine. With such a broadside it would be signally discouraging to not damage something. Damage the News does, but not in the quarter intended, and its bad marksmanship is equally displayed in crippling its friends and missing its opponents.

For instance we are reminded that "In Alberta under the Conservative Government, timber licenses were subject to revision by the Government from year to year," which privilege of "revision" be it noted, was ignored or exercised with a scrupulous regard for the political character of the holders of the licenses. The license which had been obtained as a gift was continued as a favor. However great the expense of a milling plant by which alone the timber could be brought into use the holder of the license had no legal recognition of vested interests in installing such plant; his security rested absolutely on the pleasure of his benefactors and behind this on his attitude toward those benefactors. If his loyalty to the party in power were beyond question all was well with him; otherwise there was the "revision" by which the terms of his lease could be so "revised" as to hopelessly handicap his plant and give his trade to his competitors. Moreover, there hung above him the threat of change of the Government, and the Government's word of a Government's honor. Having no guarantee beyond the current year he had none beyond the life of the Government. Should the power which had bestowed the favor fall what assurance had he of consolation or justice if the Government's word was not honored? The probability of which he was taught to look to such event were those most calculated to doubly ensure his loyalty and influence to his patrons. His license had not been procured as a commercial commodity and was guaranteed by no commercial safeguard; it originated in political favoritism and was guaranteed alone by the constancy of that favoritism.

On the other hand the News tells us "Sifton gave his friends licenses to run for twenty years." In a sense this is correct so far as it goes, but it goes considerably less than half way. It should have been added that the licenses were "given" quite as readily and quite as frequently to "enemies" as to "friends"; that allies political friend and political enemy paid for the license the market value of the timber and that friend and enemy alike was given ordinary commercial security for his investment and for the further investment he must make in installing a mill to cut the timber. This was the difference between the old and new license regulations.

Licenses to cut timber had formerly been practically given and actually continued as Government favors; under the present Government they have been sold as articles of commerce and legally safeguarded by recognition of vested interests. Lumber manufacturing has ceased to exist by gracious consent of a patronizing Government and has become a business, conducted for business purposes on business principles and surrounded by the safeguards under which alone it could have become a business.

But the News exclaims, "Has the price of lumber been reduced? Has it not gone up steadily?" True, the price of lumber is higher today than in 1896, but is not also the price of land higher? Is not the price of every resource of limited quantity enhanced by increase of population and the consequent increase of demand? The real question is not whether lumber is more expensive now than in 1896, but whether lumber is not less expensive today by reason of the twenty-year licenses than it would be with the "revision" of licenses as practised by the Conservative Government and as advocated by their worshippers to-day? This question the News very wisely avoids, but it is the question and the whole question at issue. That the News does not raise it is evidence of its business judgment, but not of its political fairness.

To bolster its condemnation of the present administration the News indulges in the following paragraph, which is either an instance of unparaphrased ignorance or deliberate falsehood: "In Alberta, under the Conservative Government, the timber limits near railways, or within any reasonable distance of railways are today being converted into lumber as rapidly as modern machinery can affect the change."

To explain the higher prices of today as compared with former years the News raises the question of a lumber combine and says: "Is there a combine among the 'lumbermen'? Who doubts it? And 'there is a law against combines.' Under this law the Ontario Government has prosecuted the lumbermen 'and the grocers' guild. But what is the Alberta Government doing? 'Nothing!'"

What the existence of a combine may have to do with the administration of the timber limits we are left to conjecture, but since the point has been raised it does not know of the fact and produce the evidence? This is the only manly course on which the allegation can be made or the Government or anyone else urged to prosecute. To afford the News what encouragement we can in making good its insinuation we can assure it that at least one Liberal newspaper will reproduce the evidence and will join it in urging prosecution should a combine be found to exist.

—The Edmonton hall team are playing in Wetaskiwin this evening, on their return from Calgary.

—The annual Sunday school picnic of McDougall Methodist church will be held this afternoon on Groat's Flats.

—Mr. W. C. Simmons, M.P.P. for Lethbridge is in the city today on departmental business. Mr. Simmons is enthusiastic over the crop prospects in the south country. He says they never looked better, and this year will be a record breaker.

—"Hammond & Co." is the name of a new firm opening up a real estate office on Jasper ave. first door west of Haller & Aldridge's bakery.
 E. Hammond is an old-time Montrealean and has been in the Edmonton district more than a year. His son will assist him in conducting the business.

—Master Fred Daly of Sixth street attracted a good deal of attention yesterday afternoon with his new Studebaker Junior. This is a handsome miniature wagon which Fred has purchased for his dog Carlo, to deliver his papers. Carlo is fitted up in fine style with new harness and is apparently as much elated as his master over the new wagon. Master Fred handles all the American newspapers.

—J. Harlan, of Vegreville, is in the city for a short visit. Mr. Harlan is one of the pioneers of the Vegreville district, having come from the States some five years ago. He has a quarter section of finest land in the district, located about four miles west of the town. He says that the prospects for the crops around Vegreville are splendid. There has been just enough rain to bring the wheat on in excellent condition and if no more wet weather comes, the crops will be very heavy indeed.

—In addition to procuring the cream of negro talent, Richards & Pringle's famous G-Georgia Minstrels introduce a sensational offering in Maran Craig, "The Human Enigma"—Kirk & Cooper, "The Musical Photographers"; Clarence Powell, the singing comedian; James Crosby and his famous song and dance, "The Jolly Six Old Men"; the 3 Toneya in acrobatic feats. This vocal part of the program is claimed to be exceptional strong, while the musical numbers will excel anything attempted by minstrel shows. They appear at the Thistle Theatre on Monday evening.

—J. McCaig has accepted the position of superintendent of city schools. Mr. McCaig is well known in the city and throughout the province.
 He taught for a number of years in the south and was inspector in the Edmonton district during 1905. Since the beginning of the year he has been vice-principal of the normal school at Calgary. In accepting the position the new superintendent will be undertaking important duties and large responsibilities but there is probably no one in the province better qualified for the work. Mr. McCaig has a good record behind him as teacher and especially as inspector and is thoroughly conversant with school work and with our system in all its details and he is thoroughly western in sympathy and interests. He graduated from Toronto in 1894 and before coming west taught in the Peterboro ex-legiate institute.

GOSPEL MEETINGS.

(Contributed)

A Gospel tent has been pitched on the corner of Jasper avenue and Third street and meetings are being held each night. Tuesday evening, Eld. C.
 A. Burman, spoke of the world-wide preparation for war and showed that this condition was foretold by scripture, and pointed out that it was a sign of the last days. Wednesday evening the subject considered was the San Francisco earthquake and other disasters. These things are becoming more and more frequent, there having been eleven destructive earthquakes during the past six months. These were also shown to be signs of the soon coming of our Saviour, Luke 21:11. Last evening the theme discussed was the manner of Christ's second coming and the events which will take place at that time. From many texts of scripture it was explained that Christ will come as a real person, and "every eye shall see Him"; John 11:1-3, Acts 1:9-11; Rev.

 1:7. He will be accompanied by all the angels of Heaven of whom there are "ten thousand times ten thousand and thousands of thousands." Matt.
 25:31.

At this time the righteous dead will be raised, the righteous living translated, and the wicked living destroyed by the brightness of his coming. 1 Thes. 4:16-17; 11 Thes. 2:8. Surely then this is an important subject and worthy of study.
 The meetings will continue all next week and many interesting and profitable subjects will be presented from the word of God.

FRIDAY, JULY 27, 1906.

BRITISH WORKMEN IN CANADA

York, England, July 26.—An immigrant from Leeds writing to the "Yorkshire Post" from Winnipeg says:
"As to the English being received with "open arms" by the Canadians and Englishmen come expecting this) only to "day a friend of mine who has been "at his trade for thirty years, was told "that an Englishman was 'no damned "good'. Papers contain advertisements "with words 'No English need apply'.
"I have before me now two reports of "suicides of immigrants who had not "been able to find regular work. It "is quite a common occurrence to read
"of 'An emigrant suicides'."

The immigrant from England or any other country who expects to be received with "open arms" in Canada or in any new country labors under a delusion which is certain to be ruined. Most people are too busy trying to make a living to go into no exception to the rule and because we are not we should not be charged with prejudice toward new comers from the land of our forefathers. More than this the immigrant who requires an "open arm" reception is not the immigrant into Canada. The man who really contributes to the welfare of the country is the one who tries to adjust himself to the different conditions of the new country and then regardless of what people say to him or about him starts in to shape success out of these conditions. Such a man soon demonstrates that he is made of the proper material and will not fail to be credited according to his deserts.

In the instance cited the correspondent fails to note the law of cause and effect. The reason the tradesman of forty years experience was not favorably received was probably because he had forty years experience and because he had gained that experience under altogether different conditions from those prevailing in Canada. A man who has worked forty years at his trade is presumably a man from fifty five to sixty years of age—an age at which he is by no means debilitated from doing splendid work of the kind and under the conditions to which he has been accustomed, but an age which places an all but impossible handicap on the immigrant who must adapt himself to the different kind of work and conditions of work in a new country before he can compete on equal terms with the tradesman familiar with that work and with those conditions.

If Canadian newspapers sometimes contain the harsh advertisement that "No Englishmen need apply" it is because the class of Englishmen who have come to Canada have not always been of a character calculated to earn a high reputation for workmanship for the British workman. But these occasional discriminations are so rare that they indicate no general or even appreciable attitude of Canadian employees toward British workmen. Nowhere outside Great Britain is the reliability and thoroughness of the qualified British workman more frequently admitted than in Canada and in Canada by no classes more than by the Canadian employers and the Canadian employees. The testimony of the former is borne by their continuous efforts to secure British workmen for their Canadian factories and that of the latter by their not less persistent attempts to frustrate these efforts.

That a new comer occasionally succides is true. But there are suicides among those who are not new-comers and even among native born. And where immigrants have succeeded through discouragement it has not always, nor even in the majority of cases been clear that the only or even the chief source of discouragement was the lack of work. In many at least of these cases there have been other motives in no way related to the occupation of the immigrant nor chargeable to the conditions of the country. And if some immigrants have grown despondent through failure to secure steady employment was this because they had come to Canada? Have there been no parallel cases in Great Britain? Have there not been instances quite as numerous in proportion of men of the same occupation, of similar standing, of equal ability and experience who did not emigrate and who grew despondent even to desperation through lack of employment? And what reason is there to suppose that the unfortunate immigrant would have been less unfortunate if he had not immigrated? The fact that he immigrated is evidence at least that his conditions and prospects at home were not satisfactory.

There is room, opportunity, and appreciation in Canada for qualified British workmen but there is not room in Canada or elsewhere for counterfeit workmen from Britain or elsewhere nor for those whose specialized skill prevents them adapting themselves to the necessarily different conditions and work of a country yet in the initial stages of its development.

CAUSE UNKNOWN

(Special to the Bulletin) Nelson, B.C., July 26.—The jury in the Beaver Canyon accident on the Great Northern have brought in a verdict that no evidence was adduced to show what caused the wheels of the bullet car to mount the rails nor was there any evidence to show negligence.

THE Oxford Hot Water Boiler takes advantage of every known scientific point which will increase the generation and distribution of heat.
We have increased its power economically by making the walls of the fire pot slant inwards above the fire. This gives a greater surface for the direct action of the rays of heat.

Oxford Hot Water Boiler

The first water section over the fire is double depth, with bell-shaped flues, which also increases the surface directly displayed to the action of the heat.

These are but two of the exclusive points which make the Oxford Hot Water Boiler the most economical and most efficient home-warming apparatus on the market. If you will drop us a post card, we will send you our catalogue, which explains the whole system.

Have You Ever Thought Edmonton Real Estate Has Always Been Good Buying?

But it never was as gilt edged as it is to-day, because it never was such a certainty.
One good crop after another has eased all minds as to the stability and fertility of the soil and this is all that is required to make Edmonton the Chicago of Western Canada.
Our city has passed the experimental stage, and the wise (?) men who looked on and predicted all kinds of evil things are soreheads now because they didn't buy.

The eyes of Manufacturers have seen the rapid and substantial growth of the city and the possibilities there are for their business not only in the city but in the vast expanse of splendid country within easy distance of it, with the large number of thriving towns springing up in every direction.

Edmonton is bound to grow by leaps and bounds during the next five years and there are many now living here who will say at the end of that time "Why didn't I buy some cheap property five years ago?" Are you going to be among the number, or are you going to sieze the opportunity NOW and save yourself all those bitter regrets?

Large Fifty Foot Lots in

(From "Canada.")

Winnipeg, June 16.—The Englishman who in these days settles in the Canadian North-West has an easy life, by comparison with that which confronted the early settlers in the older Provinces. Take, for instance, the history of the Scotch settlements in the County of Huntingdon, and the adjoining signiorities of Chateaugay and Beaurhains in the Province of Quebec.

The original settlers were for most part Paisley weavers. They crossed the Atlantic in small sailing ships from 1830 to 1838, and found all that regin a wilderness of forest, except that there a settler from the United States, close by, was howling out a home for himself. The first business of the Paisley man was to hew out a home. He began by felling medium-sized logs, which could be hauled without difficulty. When he had accumulated a sufficient number, his friends, who had accompanied him from the old country, together with the Americans, joined in what was known as a "raising." The logs, notched at the ends, were laid one above another in the form of a square. The first few were easily got into place, but, as the wall rose, the lifting of the rest into place was a laborious task.

As a rule, the log house was twelve feet square. At one end was the fireplace, at the other the solitary window. When the walls were up, the rear was left higher than the front, to allow of a slant for the roof, which was made of basswood or elm bark. The openings between the logs and roof were packed with moss. The interiors between the logs in the walls were also packed with moss, and afterwards plastered with mud. The furniture of the house was generally manufactured from hardwood trees. The fuel consisted of green logs, until such time as the settler was able to dry his cordwood. There were no lucifer matches, nothing but flint and steel with "punk" wood. The cooking utensils comprised a frying-pan and a Dutch oven with a tight lid, in which bread was baked.

There was little variety in the food. Deer were plentiful, the fat of the animal was made into candles, his hide into rude carpets, his sinews into things that held together the small wooden cart. Bear meat, usually called bush pork, also abounded. The settler began farming by putting in a crop of oats and potatoes amongst the stumps in the cleared land round about his house; this gave him oatmeal for porridge, and his cow provided the milk. In the spring the forest yielded maple syrup and sugar. He had no tea, no China tea, but the American squatters taught him to brew sage and hemlock tea, and to make coffee from roasted peas.

As clearing proceeded, the felled trees were made into potash. A large heap of trees was collected and set on fire; the ashes were raked into a pile, and covered with sheets of elm bark to protect them from rain. They were then packed in wooden troughs and water was poured upon them, which, soaking slowly through, dripped into a barrel in the form of lye. The lye was boiled in a huge kettle, and ladled out when it had become a thick mass. This thick mass was known as "black salts." It took fifteen bushels of ashes to make a hundred-weight of black salts, that is, of potash. The potash was subsequently placed in ovens, and converted into pearl ash. Both the pearl ash and the potash were hauled to the St. Lawrence, and exported to England. For a long time England addicted them free whilst taxing their six shillings a hundred weight if exported from the United States or Russia.

It is not necessary to describe the arduous life of the settler during long years that elapsed before he got into anything like comfortable circumstances. In the absence of roads he had to carry his grain on his back through the trackless forest to the nearest mill, and return with the flour in the same way. There were no post-offices nearer than Montreal. He was lucky if his letters reached him three months after their arrival from the Old Country. He worked in the bush with a yoke of oxen; it was not until roads had been built that he could use horses. Schools and churches were few and far between. His wife and children shared his labors. Life was one perpetual grind, and narrowed in the depths of the forest, he might as well have been in prison; it was only on Sundays that he met his neighbors, as much isolated as himself. The pine stumps were left to rot in the ground; it took from ten to twenty years to get rid of them.

In the settlements of which I am speaking many of the first generation born of Scotch parents intermarried with French-Canadians. The French-Canadian has a wonderful faculty for assimilating other races. The descendants of the Highland soldiers who served under Wolfe at Quebec, and remained in the colony after its cession to England, soon lost their Gaelic and their religion, and became French and Catholic. Near where Sir Wilfrid Laurier lives, when at home in the Province of Quebec, there is a township called Inverness. The original settlers were Highlanders from Inverness and Perth. To-day one comes upon McKellars and MacTavishes, McKellans and Mackenzies, who, besides their Highland names, have the stature and features of Highlandmen, yet cannot speak a word of English. They have actually corrupted the word Inverness into L'Invergnosse, although they are quite a sober people.

The Englishman or Scotchman who settles in the North-West has no forest to clear. Ages ago the prairies, covering an area of a million square miles, were covered by an ocean that extended from the Rocky Mountains eastwards to the Great Lakes, and down the St. Lawrence and Ottawa valleys to the Atlantic. There are clumps of poplar and cotton-wood along the rivers, and plenty of useful scrub in other places; but, speaking generally, the prairies are treeless. Fortunately, there is an abundance of coal extending from the Souris coalfield to Lethbridge and Medicine Hat, and thence to Edmonton, whilst the Crow's Nest Pass and British Columbia are full of it.

The incoming settler, having built a house, breaks up his land in the summer and fall, and by next spring is ready to sow it with wheat and oats. There are more railways, main lines and branches, in proportion to population in Manitoba and the Territories, than in any other parts of the world. Rates, taking account of the enormous distances to be traversed, are low. The prairie furnish an abundance of coarse hay for horses and cattle. The whole country is well watered. As you go west you pass from the level to the rolling prairie, where mixed farming rather than all-wheat is carried on. The cattle and horse ranches lie immediately east of the Rocky Mountains. His homestead and pre-emption, which he gets for nothing, or next to nothing, on condition of performing settlement duties, contain 320 acres of the best land lying out of doors. The trouble generally is that he has too much land, more than he can properly cultivate.

There is no long wait for results, as was the case in Older Canada. The settler begins making money in his second year, and in ten years, if he has a fair share of luck, has a tolerably large bank account. Of course, life is not all beer and skittles. The winter is long and, in Eastern Manitoba, severe. But when he hears the timbers of his house creaking under the influence of the frost, he recalls that the same frost is the agency which stores the porous black loam of his farm with the moisture that enables him to raise thirty bushels to the acre. He has to work hard in seed time and harvest, and after harvest in preparing new land for next season's crop. Winter is a period of comparative rest, though he can always find plenty to do about his barns and byres.

If the British emigrants are wise they will not herd together, but scatter themselves, in order to be in touch with the Canadian and American farmers, from whom they can learn a great deal, and who are always glad to help them. By the time the Grand Trunk Pacific is completed, with its branches running from north to south, no part of the North-West below its main line will be more than twenty miles from a railway. On the hard prairie trails in the Fall the settler can easily team his wheat that distance in a day, returning the next day with supplies, and so on. It is probable that electric roads will soon play an important part in the hauling of grain to the railway elevators. The telephone is in full blast in the older sections of Manitoba. The other day the Manitoba Legislature made provision for the building of telephone lines by the Provincial Government and local municipalities. The isolation, of which early settlers used to complain, is going, owing to the rapidity with which the country is being colonized.

DOWNPOUR AT THE FAIR

Winnipeg, July 26.—Despite a downpour, American day at the exhibition was one of the most successful on record, an attendance of 27,000 being rolled up. In the evening the largest grand stand attendance of the fair to date was registered. Owing to the condition of the track racing events, stock parade and athletic meet were all held over. A feature of the day was the arrival of 1500 Pennsylvania editors who were made guests of the city and dined in the evening.

A LULL IN THE STORM

St. Petersburg, July 26.—Advice received from every section of Russia indicates that, with the exception of the Baltic province of Courland, where kind revolutionaries are laying the countryside in waste, at Kourama, north-east of Moscow, where peasants in Czarist provinces have risen against the officials, and in Colesau, where the revolutionaries are keeping up their campaign, the Russian empire is quieter than in many months.

You can heat

your farthest room

By installing a combination hot water and hot air heater. By this means you secure a quick warmth when the fire is started, combined with ample ventilation, while the hot water radiators in more distant apartments; and at outside walls assure a uniform heat throughout the house.

BUCK'S "LEADER" Combination Heater

Is adapted perfectly to the varying seasons of this country. The smallest fire can be perfectly maintained in the spring and fall months, giving the needed warmth by hot air, while in winter weather all the advantages of hot water heating are automatically secured.

Besides, it burns less coal than any other heater, and that soon saves its whole cost.

Write for our heater catalogue. It tells a lot of things about heating that are worth knowing.

NEW ADDITION TO REVILLON BROS.

Plans have been prepared by Architect Barnes, for a large new addition to the retail stores of Revillon Bros. The addition are to be made on Second street. The present retail stores front on Jasper avenue and extend backward on Second street for about 75. The intervening 75 feet between the stores and the wholesale building at the rear is vacant. The plans of the additions call for an entire plate glass front of 150 feet on Second street. The brick wall of the present retail stores, which flanks Second street, will be torn away, and the plate glass front installed. The addition will be partly two stories high and part will be three storeys in height. This will give the retail stores a full frontage on Jasper avenue and Second street of over 250 feet. The three storey addition will be utilized as retail stores, and offices. The contracts for the work have not yet been let. The cost of the addition will be anywhere from $30,000 to $40,000.

A NEW HOTEL

Up on the north-west corner of Fourth street and Jasper avenue a large new hotel is in course of erection. This is the Hotel Cecil, the permit for which was taken out some time ago. The work of construction on this new building has been going on for some weeks, and is making rapid progress. The proprietors of the hotel are Messrs. F. M. Lannic and C. H. Belanger. The hotel is being built of frame with brick veneer and stone corners, three storeys high. There will be thirty-eight rooms, with a ten-foot cellar. The main entrance will be on Fourth street, and will be of handsome design, with pillars. The hotel throughout will be furnished with the most up-to-date class of furniture, and with every convenience. The contractors for the building are Johnstone and Warren.

A MODERN CROESUS

Richer than Rockefeller was Alfred Beit, the South African diamond king. He himself did not say it, for he had no way of estimating—within millions of pounds sterling—his tremendous accumulations. He owned—or commanded—the company which owned—the only diamond mine of any importance in the world.

Alfred Beit, according to authorities of his own country—or, rather his adopted country, for he was born in Hamburg—was said to be a billionaire, the only man who has ever achieved that distinction. Just what this means no one can think, for the human mind cannot comprehend a billion.

Who, then, was this Colossus of Finance, this money king, who from the utilitarian standpoint was the most successful human being that has ever lived? He was no showy figure in the world of society. He was not a speculator. He was a man of big ideas and the gift of the gab. His quick and inventive brain was too big for his frail body. His health, never good, had time after time broken down under the strain.

He had a small and slender physique, and was not reckoned at all in small transactions. He had the large, luminous brown eyes of the dreamer, and the point of view of an optimist, with an extraordinary knack of getting nearly everything he wanted. He was absolutely a bundle of nerves, and his nervousness was at times quite distressing.

Although he had the controlling interest in the great diamond fields in South Africa, he wore no diamonds. He did not affect jewelry at all for personal adornment, but he had a great taste for and a magnificent collection of antique decorated jewelled objects.

He was the son of a German merchant, and at twenty years of age found himself with very little money, but with fair prospects, sitting on a clerk's stool in a shipping office at Hamburg. He was heir to his father's steady-going business, but he was put in the office as an ordinary employee to learn the technicalities of the business from the bottom to the top. It was in connection with this business that he took the step which led him on to fortune.

Thirty-eight years ago the first diamond was picked up in South Africa, and there was a great rush to the country from Germany as well as from England. A brisk trade sprang up and large orders for stores and machinery of all kinds reached Hamburg merchants. One of the firms affected by this sudden growth of commerce was the shipping firm to which young Beit belonged, and as at that time with prospect in South Africa was not a certain one, and credit orders were risky, a crash being possible at any moment, the firm decided to send out a representative to investigate and report. Mr. Beit was twenty-two at the time, but he had established himself so well in the good graces of the heads of the business that he was chosen for the task and set sail for Cape Town.

It was the young German's great opportunity, and he was not slow to seize it. His years of training in the Hamburg shipping office had not been wasted. He was cool-headed, a man of orderly business methods and he quickly realized that not all of the wealth of the mines would save Kimberley unless order took the place of chaos, and the industry was placed on a proper commercial basis. Forgetting the purpose for which he had been sent out, Mr. Beit set to work to accomplish this object and soon found himself so indispensable to the diamond industry that he resolved to remain in the country for some years. From that time his fortune was made.

Though the late Cecil Rhodes is inseparably associated with the history of South Africa, Mr. Beit was in that country several years before him, and it was he who first realized the danger of putting too many diamonds on the market at once. He saw that diamonds might easily become so cheap as to be profitless to mine, and he began to carry out his idea of controlling the market by buying up scattered claims. The result was that when Mr. Rhodes appeared on the scene Mr. Beit was already well established as a diamond king in his own domain. Rhodes, however, was destined to work a great change in the state of affairs. The great house of Werner Beit & Company is the leading house in the Kimberley diamond trade, and Mr. Beit was also associated with many other gigantic concerns. One of his firms holds two million acres of the most valuable agricultural and mineral land in the South African Republic. He is a director of the British South African company, the United Concessions, and the Exploration, all of them most valuable properties. It is beyond a doubt that Mr. Beit amassed the biggest individual fortune ever made out of gold and diamond mines.
